The FBI announced today a reward of up to $25,000 for information leading to the recovery of artwork stolen from the Springfield Art Museum at 1111 East Brookside Dr. in Springfield, Missouri. It is believed the break-in and theft occurred sometime during the early morning hours on April 7, 2016, at which time seven of 10 Andy Warhol paintings on permanent display at the museum were taken. The collection, which has been owned by the Springfield Art Museum since 1985, is set number 31 of the Campbell's Soup I collection and is valued at approximately $500,000. Each painting in the screen print collection measures 37 inches high by 24.5 inches wide and framed in white frames.
