New York is a town whose crowds—of which you are now a crucial part—have long been instruments of political progress. In the 1760s and 1770s, when Americans were required to pay taxes to a British government they had no voice in, locals gathered by the thousands on the Common, where City Hall now stands. One influential protest group in those days was the Sons of Liberty, who represented artisans, apprentices, seamen, and laborers. They were reviled equally by the British government and the American aristocracy. In 1765, when the New York Assembly complied with the British government's Quartering Act, requiring New Yorkers to house and feed British troops, one Son of Liberty published a broadside that said, "Every man of sense among us knows that the army is not sent here to protect but to enslave us." Sound like an army you know?

So, sons and daughters of liberty, thank you for your presence on the streets. New York is honored to have you as vital members of the crowd that will help oust King George from the White House in November. Welcome.

"PUBLIC" TOILETS

Be courteous and set a positive precedent with the employees of the establishments listed below, since many of us will need to use these facilities at some point during the convention. Restaurants and corporate spaces are the most difficult to access, requiring a purchase or a security badge. Department stores, bookstores, and hotels are top choices. Be friendly; blend in; if necessary, pose as a tourist. Locations are listed (loosely) north-south in 10-block increments.

It is the best of times. The wretched of this American earth are together as they have never been before, in motion if not in movement. No march, no sit-in, no boycott ever touched so many. The social cloth that binds and suffocates them is tearing at its seamiest places. The subtle methods of co-optation work no better to keep it intact than the brutal methods of repression. Above all, there is a sense that the continuity of an age has been cut, that we have arrived at an infrequent fulcrum of history, and that what comes now will be vastly different from what came before. —Andrew Kopkind
